PREVENTION IN PRACTICE

Praesidium's understanding of sexual abuse against vulnerable populations comes from decades of research – identifying the root causes of organizational abuse, studying how offenders operate, and building prevention strategies that work across industries.

As the leading expert in sexual abuse risk management, Praesidium shares the latest tips, topics and trends in abuse prevention through blogs, research papers and events – resources your clients can draw on directly.

Here are real-world examples of situations where better communication, education and awareness could help prevent a claim altogether.

➤ MISCELLANEOUS MEDICAL FACILITIES

A facility is reviewing how staff and patients raise concerns about conduct that may violate policy. Praesidium resources help evaluate training, reporting channels, and policy practices to address gaps before they become incidents.

➤ SOCIAL SERVICES

A social services organization wants a consistent way to screen personnel and reinforce expectations for staff and volunteers who work directly with vulnerable populations. Praesidium's screening options, model policies and training create a repeatable process.

➤ SMPA

An insured wants staff to recognize and know how best to respond to concerns involving inappropriate behavior or policy violations before they escalate. Praesidium's targeted training and expert guidance build that awareness around clear, consistent standards.

➤ PHYSICIAN GROUPS

A physician group is onboarding new clinical and administrative staff and wants to reinforce expectations for professional boundaries from day one. Praesidium Academy, model policies, and the Helpline provide a coordinated, documented approach.

➤ DAYCARES

Screening requirements for daycare staff vary widely, and gaps in criminal history or sex offender checks are common in an area with high abuse exposure. Praesidium's discounted screening packages and guidance on screening cadence help close them, giving centers a documented, consistent practice across every hire.
